Kein Kinderspiel!

Workshop for translators from German of children's and youth literature
23-28 August 2015, Hamburg/Germany

Call for applications

On 23-28 August 2015 the Arbeitskreis für Jugendliteratur e.V. (IBBY Germany) and the Robert Bosch Stiftung will host the sixth annual workshop on the translation of German literature for children and young people entitled 'Kein Kinderspiel!'. It will take place in Hamburg/Germany and will be held in German.

The five-day workshop offers 15 translators of children's and youth literature the opportunity to tackle specific problems of the genre and discuss current trends. Participants will have the chance to meet authors, critics and publishing representatives, and find information on grants and residencies as well as on existing networks. Above all, the workshop aims to be a centre for encounters, inspiration and exchange of ideas.

Though translators into all languages are welcome, the focus will be on translators into 'small' languages from Central, Eastern and South-Eastern Europe, North Africa and Turkey.

Participants can avail of a travel allowance. Accommodation and meals for the duration of the workshop will be free of charge.

Further details and application forms are attached or may be obtained from www.jugendliteratur.org and www.bosch-stiftung.de/brueckenbauer.

Applications should be sent by email with corresponding enclosures by 2 May 2015 at the latest.

Please forward this information to interested persons. Thank you very much.
